MENLO PARK NEWS NOTES

Mr. William Dowd passed away in San Francisco last Thursday following a lingering illness and was buried in San Francisco on Monday. The deceased was engaged in the plumbing business for a number of years. Mr. Dowd lived on Fairview avenue. He is survived by his widow.

Miss Katherine Donohue was returned to office as one of the directors of the San Francisco Women's City Club when the organization held election of directors Monday. But whether she will also succeed herself as president of the club yet remains to be determined when the new and holdover members of the board of 26 women reorganize and elect their own officers.

St. Joseph's School has opened with an increased attendance. The grammar school has also opened with a big membership.

The recent cold snap has played havoc with local gardens. The fruit on the orange trees, except on those that had been covered, was entirely destroyed.

Water is flowing in the San Francisco creek three feet deep. This is the first time in many months that water has been in the stream.

A local Japanese concern has leased the six acres of land on Glenwood and Laurel avenues to cultivate and grow flowers of many varieties. The property has not been under cultivation for many years. The soil is fertile and should produce large crops.

Mrs. C. Dodely, president of the Ceramic Art Club, was guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of Menlo Park Woman's Club Monday, when members of the organization were guests of the Country Federation president, Mrs. R. L. Stone, at her home in Burlingame.

Mrs. Dodely spoke on ceramic art and displayed exhibits of ceramic products.

At the business meeting that followed the luncheon Mrs. Verna Runk of Santa Rosa was endorsed for first vice president of the San Francisco District Federation; reports of committees were heard, and talks were made by Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Kay Lenzon, past president of the Hypatia Club.

Rockwell Stone, son of the hostess, entertained the group with a humorous reading.

District Deputy Grand President Jessie Leslie of Bonita Parlor No. 10 installed officers for Menlo Park Parlor No. 211, Native Daughters of the Golden West, Monday night. In spite of bad weather, a good representation was present to welcome the honored

Birthday Ball Plans Made

Arrangements for the county-wide President's Birthday Ball to be held at Tanforan Clubhouse January 30 were made by the committee of mayors of all major cities in the county at a weekend meeting in San Mateo.

Mayor Paul A. McCarthy of Redwood City was named on the committee to arrange the musical portion of the night's program. Other members are Mayors C. A. Buck of Burlingame and Frank P. Simmen of San Mateo.

At its meeting the committee unanimously endorsed the movement this year to have only one huge affair for the entire county rather than individual balls in each city, and pledged co-operation to Joseph V. Gaffey, Burlingame postmaster, chairman of the ball this year.

First distribution of tickets will be started when 2000 tickets, half of them printed in Redwood City, will be offered at 75 cents each. The price was reduced this year because of the lessened overhead expense with only one event instead of several. Some 4000 dancers are expected to turn out for the ball.

Ballroom arrangements and parking problems were left up to Mayor William I. Farmer of San Bruno and American Legionnaires will be designated to keep order. Aid of all civic bodies and service clubs will be solicited in an effort to make the event successful.

Seventy per cent of the proceeds are used in San Mateo county for its fight against infantile paralysis and similar serious maladies. The remainder is used by the United States against infantile paralysis.

The committee will next meet at San Mateo City Hall at 4 p.m. Wednesday, it was decided, to review progress on the affair.

Dope Seller Given Mercy

Nolberta Nunes, diminutive Portuguese housewife convicted of possession and selling marijuana, received mercy Monday from Superior Judge Maxwell McNutt—mercy in the form of two years' probation.

In addition, the judge imposed a sentence of one month in the county jail. But since she had been there for several months already and she was given credit for this time served, she was granted liberty immediately to return to her little coasts farm house where her young son was awaiting her.

School Burned, But S. M. Pupils' Dream Is Foiled

SAN MATEO, Jan. 12—Although the proverbial schoolboy's dream had come true for students of the Peninsula Avenue Elementary School here when their building was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning, they found themselves going to school today just the same, when classes were being conducted at the Central School.

The day has been split, the regular Central classes running from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and Peninsula schedules from 12:30 to 5 p.m., an arrangement slated to continue, school officials said, until a new building is constructed or the present structure rebuilt.

A minimum of $50,000 is declared necessary to replace the old school, which was completely demolished by the blaze, save for the auditorium, added eight years ago to the 31-year-old main buildings.

The island of Singapore was ceded to the East India company in 1819 by the Sultan of Johore.

Wyatt Picks 'High Lights'

Twenty-two salient accomplishments made possible through committee work and financial support of the membership of Redwood City Chamber of Commerce were reviewed on the back of the printed program for the annual chamber and community dinner Wednesday evening at Sequoia high school.

Prepared by Roscoe Wyatt, secretary-manager of the local chamber of commerce, the "high lights of 1936" are to be listed as follows:

1. Held City Entrance Beautification Contest and awarded $30 in prizes.
2. Worked for favorable port legislation in congress. (Allin Amendment.)
3. Conducted Better Citizenship Campaign in cooperation with eleven community organizations.
4. Secured the approval of the city council, through the recommendation of the Merchants' Division (W. D. Ryan, chairman), of a uniform observance of certain holidays.

5. Considered proposals on Rapid Transit and Bayshore Belt Railroad and was represented at subsequent meetings by Elmore Hinman and Henry Witte.

6. Protested lack of attention by Transit Committee of San Francisco to peninsula needs.

7. Provided trophies for Humane Society Pet Show and Parade.

8. Named Harbor Bond Campaign Committee which raised more than $1,000 and secured favorable action in a 4 to 1 vote.

9. Warned recipients of soldier's adjusted compensation payments to beware of racketeers, at suggestion of American Legion.

10. Represented at grade crossing conference by Major H. W. Edmonds.

11. Entered contract with city council to conduct city advertising and published 10,000 city folders.

12. Secured cooperation of the city and merchants and business

Bayshore Lighting Topic of Conference

The possibility of lighting the Bayshore highway from San Francisco to San Jose will be one of the principal topics to be discussed at the next meeting January 21 of the peninsula division, League of California Municipalities, at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, the city council was informed Monday. A V. Thompson of the General Electric Company will discuss the problem. City Clerk B. E. Myers reported. Councilmen indicated they would attend.

men in sharing equally the expense of holiday street lighting.

13. Solicited sponsors, speakers, polls attendants, and transportation for voters, for the Harbor Campaign Committee.

14. Telephoned 2,200 voters on day before harbor election and secured distribution of campaign folders.

15. Protested to responsible authorities, the use of "Alternate" sign over U. S. 101 on El Camino Real.

16. Urged secretary of the navy to give attention to "lighter-than-air" program, and the rehabilitation of naval air base.

17. Forestalled further unfair comparison of wholly clear days in Redwood City (231) with days on which the sun was at some time visible in San Francisco (343).

18. Conducted contest for award by Mayor Paul A. McCarthy and A. B. Cheatham for harbor campaign slogans and essays.

19. Broadcast harbor progress by direct mail to industrial prospects.

20. Joined with other communities in Bay Region Aviation Development Committee and named as representative Clifford Walk, who was made general secretary.

21. Approved proposed legislation to protect sardine industry.

22. Participated in christening Greyhound Coach "The Redwood City" to carry the name throughout the western states.

Half Moon Bay Resident For 50 Years Dies

Frank Madonna, 92, a resident of this city for two years and of Half Moon Bay for 50 years before that, passed away Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. P. Gardner, at 12 Lowell street, following a long illness.

A native of Intragna, Switzerland, Mr. Madonna was a farmer, but had retired more than 20 years ago. He was the husband of the late Theresa Madonna.

Left to mourn his passing besides Mrs. Gardner are Mrs. John Colwell of San Francisco; Mrs. P. A. Johnson of Kettleman Hills; Mrs. O. M. Winther, Sacramento; Miss Adella Madonna, San Francisco, and Frank and Quilly Madonna, both of Half Moon Bay. Four granddaughters also survive. They are Bernice and Donna Gar-

OFFICE ESTATE $87,904

The estate which Dr. Archie L. Offield of San Mateo, former superintendent of the Community Hospital, left when he died September 17, was appraised today at $87,904. Half of the estate will go to Dr. Offield's widow, and the rest to their three children.

Mr. Madonna was a member of the Half Moon Bay Lodge No. 143, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Drive for Armory Mapped By Legion

San Mateo county American Legionnaires, following a week-end meeting of the 26th district in San Bruno, were pushing a move today to win for the peninsula the armory for the 49th Signal Corps, California National Guard.

Following word that the signal corps planned to establish headquarters outside San Francisco, the district legion organization voted to sponsor the move.

Suggested sites for the armory included the old General Pictures studio in San Mateo; the Masonic Hall at Ellsworth and Tilton streets, San Mateo; Pacific City, near San Mateo, and the Belmont Legion Hall.

Gold was discovered at Juneau, Alaska, in 1880, but the great Klondike-Yukon rush did not begin until 1896.

County Plans Traffic Safety Committeemen

Nine to Devise Means To Form Permanent Organization

An entering wedge of a campaign to cut down the traffic fatalities and injuries in San Mateo county was pounded home here Tuesday night at a safety meeting studded with city and county officials and civic representatives.

Dist. Atty. Gilbert Ferrell, who called the meeting of approximately 120 delegates from all sections of the county, was empowered to appoint a committee of nine to formulate plans for the organization of a permanent traffic safety committee.

The nine will report back in "three or four weeks" to the group which met in the courthouse.

FIRE STARTED IN TOWELS

SAN MATEO, Jan. 11.—Either a match or a burning cigarette, dropped in a barrel of used paper towels, started the fire early Saturday morning which gutted the Peninsula Avenue School in San Mateo and caused damage now estimated at nearly $50,000. This was declared today by Fire Chief Hugh Morris, as he completed investigation into the fire cause.

CHAPTER I

A TALL, black-haired man in a gray business suit stood on a terrace beside the royal lodge and moodily watched the evening shadows sliding over clipped hedges and flawless lawn.

Twenty miles away, to the east, the lights of the capital city of the great empire of Northumbria put a glow on the darkening sky. The lodge—no rustic affair of logs, despite its name, but a great mansion of cut stone—rose behind him, its vast bulk seeming to express the solidity and massive weight of the empire whose monarch it housed. The man turned restlessly, looking from the eastern glow in the sky to the pile of masonry behind him.

Lights gleamed from French windows in the wall at his back. The windows swung open, as he gazed at them, and a trim young man in the uniform of a naval lieutenant came out and stepped briskly across the flagged pavement. Halting a few yards from the tall man in gray, this officer clicked his heels and said, "Your majesty, it is ready."

The tall man straightened with an air of relief, and flipped his cigarette into the shrubbery.

"Curtain for the last act, eh?" he said quietly. "All right, Bart. I'll be right in."

The officer wheeled formally, as if he stood on a quarterdeck in the presence of an admiral, and backed inside. The tall man took one more look around him at the exquisitely artificial landscape, the formal flower beds, the hedges in which not one leaf was out of place, and drew a long breath. Then, thrusting his hands deep into his pockets and throwing his head back with a half-defiant gesture, he followed the officer through the French windows and into the room.

Half a dozen men stood about the spacious room; some of them were in uniform, some in formal civilian attire. All of them automatically drew themselves erect as the tall man came in. Their eyes were fixed on his face—the black mustache, the tired eyes and the boyish mouth that were recognizable in every country on the globe—and they murmured, "Good evening, sire," as he crossed briskly to an inlaid table before the wide fireplace.

He acknowledged their greeting with a careless flip of his hand and bent over the table to look at a single sheet of paper that lay on it. The royal crest decorated the top of the sheet; there followed a dozen typewritten lines which stated that "I, King Paul the First of Northumbria, hereby surrender, renounce and abdicate all rights to the throne of the empire." The tall man read it through quickly.

Beside the table stood an elderly man in evening clothes. He had an imperious Roman nose that jutted proudly above a luxuriant white mustache, and his eyes had the direct, piercing look of a man who is accustomed to command.

"Your majesty," he said, "I regret profoundly that I am forced to offer this paper for your signature."

The king looked at him and smiled suddenly.

"I believe that you really do," he said. He glanced around the room, seemed mildly surprised, and took a second look around.

From a stand of ornately carved gold he picked up a pen. . . "Well, gentlemen, it is all over," he said.

"Isn't my brother here?" he asked.

"He has gone to his rooms," said the hawk-nosed man. "He asked me to tell your majesty that he was too affected to remain. He wishes to see your majesty immediately afterward."

The king smiled again—rather sadly, this time.

"Poor Joseph. He takes it hard," he said. Then he turned to the table. From a stand of ornately carved gold he picked up a pen. For a moment he stood looking at it, as if he had never had a chance to examine a pen point before; then, as if he had come at last to some decision, he put pen to paper and in a steady hand wrote "Paul, R." at the foot of the waiting sheet. He laid the pen down carefully, stood erect, and looked about the room.

"Well, gentlemen, it is all over," he said.

NO one moved. He looked at their faces, as if trying to read the expressions on them; but all were elaborately impassive as if each man had donned a mask.

"The king, gentlemen," said Paul, "is upstairs. I am going to him now. He will be down directly."

He strode across the room, passed through a wide hall, and climbed a great flight of stairs to an upper floor. He moved jauntily, as if some profound weight had fallen from his shoulders. And, indeed, he reflected, that was precisely the case. He had dropped the weight of a great empire.

He tapped at a door at the end of a hall, opened it and went in. The room was dusky, the tall windows standing out as gray oblongs in the dark walls. A slim young man stood by one of them, silhouetted indistinctly against the deepening twilight. He did not turn around as Paul came in. Paul walked rapidly across the room and laid his hand on the youth's shoulder.

"Well, Joseph," he said affectionately, "it's all over. The king is dead. Long live the king—and may God protect and preserve him."

The young man turned. A pale, anxious face looked up through the gloom at the man who had just renounced the throne.

"Oh, Paul!" said the young man. "Paul! Why . . ."

His voice was unsteady, and his features worked as he strove to control himself. He gripped Paul's upper arm with his fingers. Paul smiled the affectionate, pitying smile of an older brother.

"Why?" he said softly. "Surely we've gone into that enough. Let's just say that I've laid down a job I ought never to have taken up. Let's say that after giving thirty-five years to the empire—twenty-five as prince, and ten as king—I am trying to get a few brief years for myself. And let's also say, Joseph, that the throne and the crown are in better hands—now than before—for they are held by a man who really believes in them."

JOSEPH looked into his eyes for a long time. Then he jerked himself away, almost savagely, and with a visible effort straightened himself and regained control of his emotions. When he spoke his voice was flat and expressionless.

"I suppose they're waiting for me—down there?"

"They are. Go on down, King Joseph."

"You're leaving—at once?"

"Right away. I expect the car is at the door now."

"And I'll never see you again."

"Never again. You don't belong to yourself any more, my boy. You belong to the people—to millions upon millions of them, carrying the hopes and the aspirations and the dreams of all of them around on your shoulders. You'll want to get away from it; you'll feel all of that as an actual, tangible weight, pressing down on you without a let-up, day and night, as long as you live. It'll be hard, especially when you see poor, downtrodden people look up at you out of their misery and say, 'God save the king!' with a break in their voices, so that you'll know that unless you help them no one will . . . and then you'll discover that the throne and the scepter are only make-believe, after all, and that there's pitifully little you can do for them . . ."

He stopped abruptly and stroked his brother's shoulder.

"Go on down, your majesty," Paul said lightly. "And—goodbye. Try not to think too badly of me."

The young king gripped his hand, hard. "Think badly of you? You've always been—my king! And you always will!"

Joseph turned and went out hurriedly without looking back.

THE open doors threw a fan of yellow light into the porte cochere. Paul came down the steps and got into the waiting automobile. A guard saluted rigidly, the car door closed with matter-of-fact finality, and the car sped noiselessly off down the drive into the darkness.

Half an hour later the car swung in through the medieval gate of ancient Fort St. Gregory. It rolled quietly past the great battlements, turned, and came at last to an open meadow which had been grazing ground for the garrison's cattle, since time immemorial, until a new kind of warfare had come along and turned it into an airport.

It took but a few moments for Paul to get into the gray monoplane that waited.

And then they were out over the ocean, and the land fell behind them, and the lights of the capital rimmed the invisible horizon far in the rear. And Paul did not look back, for he was through with the past and all its memories. He peered over the pilot's shoulder at the unfathomable blackness ahead, as if he were trying to make out the fair shape of a future that was to be his own.

HIT-RUNNER LEAVES MAN DEAD IN D. C.

Many Others Injured In Crash Series On Week-End

San Mateo county's second hit-run fatality of 1937, John Furch, 58, San Francisco, lay dead today as police and highway patrolmen tabulated the toll of a series of week-end accidents on highways made treacherously slippery by rain.

Daly City police questioned one man in connection with Furch's death, which occurred there at 12:30 a.m. today, when he was apparently run over while lying in a parking lane.

But the suspect, Robert E. Dawson of Bayshore City, was not held following questioning by Louis B. Dematteis, deputy district attorney.

Furch was killed instantly at nearly the same spot where former Chief of Police Jack Doyle of Daly City met death in a hit-run accident nearly a month ago.

Meanwhile highway patrolmen arrested Morris Corelio, 38, Half Moon Bay Filipino, and charged him with misdemeanor hit-and-run driving. Corelio, according to Capt. Paul Perussina, struck the machine of Lester Coy, Redwood City, knocking him off a road near Belmont, then forcing two young cyclists into a field, before speeding on. Coy was uninjured; the cyclists, both Burlingame youths, were scratched and bruised.

Mills Memorial Hospital attaches said they believed William Cassidy, 43, Bay Meadows groom, was dying today from injuries suffered when he was struck in Burlingame yesterday by the machine of County Recorder T. Clark Rice.

Cassidy incurred a skull fracture and a broken leg and broken wrist.

County Assessor Dan Flynn and County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman were passengers in Rice's car at the time of the accident.

Three San Franciscans were injured Sunday night at San Carlos in a head-on crash. They were Barbara Price, broken jaw; Frank Nieto, broken thumb; Frank Lee, head cuts.

Other San Franciscans injured in county highway crashes were Gloria Damonte, Ethel French and George Damonte, cut and bruised Saturday at Lawndale.

Joseph H. Canfield, 45, of San Carlos, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated, when his car collided with one driven by G. E. Santina, San Jose, on the Bayshore Highway at Redwood City shortly before noon today. No one was injured.

Approximately four and a half million persons were injured and 31,500 killed in their homes in 1935.

Lowe to Head Ticket Sales

Paul E. Lowe has been named chairman of the ticket committee for the President's Birthday Ball to be held January 30 at Tanforan. Fire Chief Mark A. Ryan, general chairman for Redwood City, announced today.

Explaining why only one county-wide ball is being held this year, instead of several in various peninsula cities as in the past, Lowe pointed out it was to eliminate duplication of expenses.

Two thousand tickets will be placed on sale in a day or two at 75 cents apiece, he said, when plans are completed by Postmaster Joseph V. Caffey of Burlingame, San Mateo county chairman.

Other ticket committee members selected were Bryce Muir, Kiwanis; Clyde Genocchio, police; Daisy Barteaux, relief corps; Jean Pleague, firemen; Edmund Scott, Eagles; James M. Eva, Exchange Club; Louis Lodi, Native Sons; Elizabeth Gould, Native Daughters; Walter D. Lynch, Lions; Mrs. W. A. Paize, Woodcraft; Mrs. McAttee, Woman's Club; Mrs. Simpson Reinhard, Business Women; A. P. Jordan, Foresters; Roger Walsh, American Legion; O. K. Whittenburg, Veterans of Foreign Wars; A. J. Dempsey, Spanish Veterans; W. W. Hilton, Masons; Glenn E. Alexander, Odd Fellows; C. S. Grandi, Italian-American

LUCKENBACHS POOR TENANTS, ATHERTON MAN SAYS IN SUIT

Lewis Luckenbach of Palo Alto, San Francisco shipping executive, who recently was in the divorce courts, was sued here for $1,623 damages allegedly done to an Atherton home Mr. and Mrs. Luckenbach leased from December 21, 1935, to May 23, 1936.

Plaintiff in the action is James W. Celler, owner of the home. He charges that Luckenbach cut down three valuable Japanese cutting peace trees, destroyed molehill and Russian rugs, and damaged a heater and mattress, as well as a bathroom stool. In addition, according to Celler's suit, the shipping firm had harmed walls and the ceiling of the sleeping porch, and damaged the living room fireplace of the luxurious two-story home owned by Celler on Austin avenue, between Alameda and Tuscadero.

The suit was filed through the Redwood City law firm of Larrouty and MacDonald.

Progressive Club; Mrs. O. F. Nuckolls, Democratic Club; Ray H. Parker, Moose, and E. B. Grill, Sportsmen.

From neighboring communities, Miss Victoria Rousset, Mrs. John Smith, and Mrs. Kathleen Rouseau, all of Belmont; Mrs. John A. Boyd and Jesse Davis of San Carlos; John Duzanica, Portola; L. E. John, Mrs. Percy Jarvis and J. V. Neuman, Woodside; Mrs. Frank Derry, Menlo Park; A. Louis Bellotti, Atherton, and Ward Tucker, North Fair Oaks, were chosen.

OFFICERS' PAY RAISED

SAN JOSE, Jan. 12.—Salaries of City Manager C. B. Goodwin and City Atty. Archer Bowden were increased by the city council last night. Goodwin's salary was jumped from $6,000 to $7,200 a year and Bowden's from $4,200 to $5,100.

The Stanford University-California track meet is scheduled this year for April 24 in Berkeley at Edwards Field.

Taxes in 1890 took 7.2 per cent of the national income; in 1930 they took 14.4.

Seventh Application Filed for County Job

Seventh applicant for the position of County Executive Walter Kellogg, O. E. Fisher of Santa Cruz, former traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific railroads, has notified the county board of supervisors that he wished to be considered for the $6000 a year post.

Fisher listed executive experience in auditing, purchasing and construction, and said that he was well acquainted with advertising and public relations. The executive position will be refilled by the board, which has notified Kellogg that he will not be rehired at the expiration of his term, May 29.

Daly City Seeking Independent P. O.

DAILY CITY, Jan. 12.—As the main feature of a five-point drive, a committee of prominent Daly City merchants was today contacting officials and others on the proper procedure for securing an independent postoffice here.

A city-wide street safety program, improved lighting during the 1937 Christmas season, a new members campaign, and ultimately more publicity for the organization were the other projects to be undertaken by the Daly City Merchants' Association during the coming year. Ernest Milo has been installed as president, succeeding W. E. Pitschke.

PAUL I. King of Northumbria, becomes private citizen PAUL PERONE when he abdicates for the love of ARDATH RICHMOND, a Canadian-born actress. Paul's younger brother, JOSEPH, succeeds to the kingship.

With calm finality, Paul signs the formal abdication papers at his royal lodge, says, "Well, gentlemen, it is all over." Then he spends a few last minutes with his brother Joseph. "Joseph," he says, "you don't belong to yourself any more. You belong to the people now... goodbye."

In a few seconds Paul is whisked away to the royal airport, his plane takes off and he leaves his throne behind him forever. He looks over the pilot's shoulder ahead, as if trying to make out what lies out there in the future.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional and imaginary and are not intended to portray any actual persons or events.

CHAPTER II

THE sun sparkled on the unbelievably blue of the Bay of St. Francis. The green land lay in a wide curve, a rim of golden sand meeting the white surf; to the north, the sullen blackness of Cape Roman lay in a jumbled, rocky line on the horizon, a barrier to cut off the storms of the open sea and insure for the bay an everlasting peace.

The villas lay scattered along the shore, gay with their white walls and their red roofs. Neat green lawns ran down to the sand, broken by old stone walls and flights of whitewashed stone steps.

In all the world there was not a spot where things were more perfectly arranged to permit life to flow smoothly and easily.

The Villa San Margarete was one of the largest. An ivy-grown stone wall shut it off from the winding road on the landward side; toward the sea, a wide lawn sloped gently down to the curving shore. A second-story balcony with its wrought iron railing and its colorful canopy of red and white striped canvas overlooked the wide bay; climbing roses grew from the ground and twined their tendrils in and out of the railing, and serious-minded bees went bustling noisily from blossom to blossom.

There was a breakfast table on the balcony. Two people, a man and a woman, sat there looking out over the blue bay, saying little, thinking and feeling much. One of them was the former King, Paul the First of Northumbria, now private citizen Paul Perone; the other was the Canadian-born former Ardath Richmond, once an actress familiar to New York and Hollywood and now—by grace of a ceremony performed twelve hours ago in the prefect's office at the little village of San Lorenzo—Mrs. Paul Perone.

She was a tall woman, with the palest of blond hair and the fairest of fair skins. Her features were regular, delicate, more patrician-looking than those of the man beside her—which was rather odd, for she was the daughter of a Scandinavian baggage man in an Alberta junction town, while he was the descendant of innumerable kings.

"Do you mind," said Paul, taking a cigarette from an ebony box on the table, "if I just sit here for a while? You have no idea how marvelous it is to feel that I can just sit here all day, if I want to—to feel that there are no demands on my time, no people who have a right to come and present me with an elaborate schedule of the day's activities."

She smiled at him fondly. "Life is all my own—all our

"Paul," she said softly, "are you very, very sure that it's all... worth it? Are you—"

"Worth it? Worth it? My own, my own—worth it? Never ask me that again." He held her close, and her fair head lay on his shoulder by his dark one. "I've given up nothing and I've gained everything. I've gained freedom, life, happiness..."

He stopped, and pressed his lips on her hair. She looked up and kissed him quickly, and smiled.

"You renounced a throne, and I—a reputation," she said lightly. "You know, Paul, I am a conscientious gold digger. I am, really. Almost any woman on earth would tell you that."

"Gold digger. Sweet gold digger. Goddess. Angel."

"They would. I'm a schemer. A selfish, designing—"

"Shall I tell you what you are? You are the moonlight on the sea and the wind on the mountain at dawn. You are what I feel when I hear great music and what I see when I look into the coals in the fire and dream long dreams. You are what I have lived for and what I would happily die for. You are you, perfect and adorable. You are very, very lovely."

She looked up and kissed him. "Shall I tell you what you are?" Paul asked. "You are what I have lived for and what I would happily die for. You are you, perfect and adorable."

own," he said slowly. "Just think of it, dear. No more interference, no more fuss-and-feathers, no more flunkies in gold braid hovering at every door—"

"No more reviews, no more cornerstones—"

He paused, to gaze contentedly at the sea. A shadow fell across her face, and she slid closer to him.

"Paul," she said softly, "are you very, very sure that it's all... worth it? Are you—"

"Worth it? Worth it? My own, my own—worth it? Never ask me that again." He held her close, and her fair head lay on his shoulder by his dark one. "I've given up nothing and I've gained everything. I've gained freedom, life, happiness..."

He stopped, and pressed his lips on her hair. She looked up and kissed him quickly, and smiled.

You are what I feel when I hear great music and what I see when I look into the coals in the fire and dream long dreams. You are what I have lived for and what I would happily die for. You are you, perfect and adorable. You are very, very lovely."

THREE hours later they lay on the sand in bathing suits, the warm southern sun lying like a grateful blanket on bodies which had been so long in the north. They were all preparing for their careers—this one was going to be a lawyer and that one was going to be an architect and the next one was going to be a professor of literature—and they were forever planning for those careers and looking ahead to the future. But what plans were there for me? I knew what my career was going to be, and I knew that it didn't really matter whether I did well or ill at the university—I'd make just as good a king one way as the other."

He broke off, and turned on his side to look at her.

"But now," he said contentedly. "Now—"

He left it unsaid, and stretched luxuriously. "Race you up to the house," he said, getting to his feet. She extended her hands, he helped her up, and they ran gaily across the sand and up the sloping lawn, laughing as if every care in the world had been left behind forever.

THE road wound a lazy way down to the village of San Lorenzo. Paul walked along with a free, easy stride, his long body clad in flannel slacks and an old sweater. Every step he took seemed to emphasize anew his freedom. He was actually walking to town, alone and unattended, to buy some necessities at a shop!

Jules, the grizzled house man at the villa, could, of course, have nipped in on his bicycle. But Paul had wanted to go himself. It was almost an adventure, to discover that he lacked something, without having an impeccable servant or a uniformed aide discover it for him, to go and get it himself instead of having an obsequious shopkeeper send it out, to go afoot like any suburban clerk instead of being carried in an ornate limousine—this, he told himself, was the very seal and emblem of his new life.

He walked into the village and made his way to a shop. The tourist season had begun, and Madame Elli, the mustachioed virago behind the counter, was hovering watchfully while a group of Americans examined her stock.

One of the tourists seemed to Paul to be the perfect example of the cartoonist's caricature of the touring American. He was big and stout, he wore plus fours and a tweed cap and horn-rimmed spectacles, and his voice was nasal and penetrating. As Paul entered the man was talking with a white-skirted and red-capped girl.

"Sure it is," he was saying. "I read it this morning in the paper on the train. This is the town, San Lorenzo, where that runaway king and his girl friend have hid out."

Paul turned quickly and looked away, in a sudden terror lest his face be recognized.

"Oh," said the girl, "let's find out where they're staying and drive by there. Maybe we could even get a look at them. Do you suppose we could?"

"Okay if you want to," said the man. "It'd be just as much worth looking at as those cathedrals you've been dragging me through."

The man bit off the end of a cigar and jabbed it in his mouth. "That spick we hired the car from'll probably know where they're staying," he went on. "I wouldn't mind having a look at that dame, myself. She must have something to make the poor sap do what he did."

Blindly, Paul groped his way to the street. Without another thought for the things he had come to buy he hurried back up the road. He could think of nothing except his overwhelming need to get behind the sheltering walls of the villa again.

Hetchy Line Aid Is Sought

Application to the federal Public Works Administration for a grant to aid in building a $260,000 Hetchy water pipe line into Northern Santa Clara county from Redwood City was being drawn up in San Francisco today by Mayor Rossi.

The mayor is acting in accordance with a resolution passed by the board of supervisors in the bay city.

Bayshore Highway Damaged By Storm

Badly hit by the rains Tuesday and overnight, the Bayshore highway is in dangerous shape today for motorists, highway officials warned.

Around the majority of culverts, swirls of water have washed out patches of the road. At many points along the bay high winds are lashing the road with spray. Danger signs have been placed at the worst sections, but many of the less serious washouts have not been labeled, due to the large number of them.

Chairman Here Of Red Cross Is Given Honor

Selection of Mrs. Mary G. Thorning, wife of Z. T. Thorning, 614 Hopkins avenue, as recipient of the Community Service Award, presented annually by the Redwood City Post No. 105, American Legion, and The Tribune to the person performing the most outstanding community service during the past year, was announced Tuesday by the board of judges.

Unanimous selection of Mrs. Thorning, a resident of this city for the past 26 years, came in recognition principally of her work in charities.

As chairman of the Redwood City chapter, American Red Cross, for the past 10 years, Mrs. Thorning has in a quiet way contributed more than any other person to the relief of deserving, unfortunate people, the judges decided. In addition, she has initiated many other movements that reflect credit on her city, not only in the past year, but during many years, it was declared by the judges, whose names were not revealed.

During the past Christmas season, Mrs. Thorning co-ordinated local agencies for distribution of toys, foods, clothing and other Christmas articles to avoid duplication or omission of any families.

Unable to obtain their regular printing stock, southern newspapers published on wallpaper for a time during the Civil War.

Varied Topics Heard By Club

Topics of practice speeches by members of the Redwood City Toastmasters Club ran an eloquent gamut Monday from war to hobbies, and from the price of gasoline to a discussion of why 1937 must be a lucky year.

With President Earl Whitaker conducting the after-dinner program in the social hall of the Methodist church, Milum Tackitt began the speeches, talking on "Recent Developments in Spain."

Russia and France, he said, are lined up with the Loyalist "Red" government. Germany, Italy and Japan are aiding the rebel Nationalists. These countries are contributing or planning to contribute troops to the fray, Tackitt said he had learned from press reports.

SITUATION IS DYNAMITE

"This is a European war is going on in Spain on a small scale," Tackitt concluded, declaring that "all that is needed to set off an international conflict is a single spark to explode the dynamite stored in the situation."

Clarence Holt blamed the 200 taxes levied on petroleum products as the reason why gasoline is high priced.

Donald Bogie maintained in a semi-humorous talk that the number "1937" assured good luck for this year. "One plus nine, the first two figures of the year, make 10—a lucky number since in the ten commandments it is the foundation of all law," he said.

USEFUL HOBBY TOLD

"Three, the third number, is also lucky, with many superstitions built around it. Seven, of course, is the traditional good luck figure, commemorated in the days of the week," he said.

"Mathematically, the year has to be lucky."

Homer Spellenburg urged gardening as a useful hobby, exhilarating, relaxing, easy to do, economical and sure of results.

Harvey Hall, critic, dealt out praise and criticism.

Hit-Run Charges Bring Jail Term

Moses Corelio, 39 Half Moon Bay Phipps, was in jail today on a 30-day sentence, when he refused to pay a $100 fine in a San Mateo court this week on charges of hit-run driving, after he assertedly ran down two youths on the Crystal Springs road near the county relief home.

Corelio was not halted until he had gone more than half a mile from the scene of the accident, Lester E. Coy, Redwood City, the man who stopped him, told police.

The state agriculture department estimates the Pinellas county (Fla.) citrus crop will yield from 1,500,000 to 1,700,000 boxes this season.

Enrollment in the high school grades of Florida public schools have increased 1898 per cent over a 25-year period.

J. C. Lists 77 For Diplomas

SAN MATEO, Jan. 11.—The tentative list of the fall 1936 graduates of the San Mateo Junior College numbers 77 students. Of these 24 are girls and 53 are boys. At this time one year ago there were 81 graduates. Following are the members of the graduating class:

McGrath Asks Two Dirigibles

Construction of two new dirigibles for the navy at a cost of $5,500,000, one of them to be built at Moffett Field, are called for in a bill which was introduced in the house Tuesday by Congressman John J. McGrath of San Mateo, according to Associated Press dispatches from Washington.

The announcement came simultaneously with plans to send Langley Shoemaker, Mountain View Chamber of Commerce secretary, to the national capital to assist in the fight for a new lighter-than-air program.

"Now that the Durant committee, which investigated the subject, has reported favorably on the future of this type of craft, it seems to me," Congressman McGrath said, "that no time should be lost in providing our navy with at least two new dirigibles."

Congressman McGrath, third ranking member of the important house naval affairs committee, said he understood assurances have been given in some quarters that one of the proposed ships "could easily be constructed" at the Sunnyvale base.

"They have an ideally equipped plant there," he added, "and it should be put to use, not retained in its present status of the army's step-child."

He referred to the transfer of jurisdiction over the field from the navy to the army more than a year ago.

Shoemaker, a disabled war veteran, has been authorized to go to Washington to assist in the fight for resumption of the dirigible-building program but is held up temporarily while $1,000 expense money is being raised.

T. B. Tests Set For Graduates

With $6000 finally received from this past year's sales of Christmas seals, the San Mateo County Health and Tuberculosis Association has announced plans for its work during 1937.

At a meeting held at the office of Dr. Hartzel H. Ray of San Mateo, it was decided to test all the 1200 students who will graduate from the seven high schools of the county and one Catholic high school. Where students react to the tests, X-rays will be made. If parents are able, they will be asked to pay for the X-rays. Otherwise the tuberculosis association will bear the expense.

Dr. Ray will act as chairman of the clinical committee. Dr. Jewell Murphy will be associated with him on the committee. They have received advice from Irene Carlson of Fort Bragg, state director of the tuberculosis testing campaign, who was present when plans were laid for the San Mateo county work.

Miss Carlson will also assist in the testing campaign, assisted by Miss Florence Boddy and Miss

'Pinch-Hit' Judges Named for County

Four superior court judges were named today by Chief Justice William H. Waste, head of the state judicial council, as substitute judges to serve when needed in San Mateo County's Superior Courts.

The jurists who will replace Judges A. R. Cotton and Maxwell McNutt when their calendars are full, or when they disqualify themselves, are Robert E. Syer and William F. James of Santa Clara county, James L. Atteridge of Santa Cruz county, and M. T. Dooling of San Benito county.

Eleanor Thronson, public health nurse of the county school system. A nurse trained in tuberculosis prevention work will be placed in the county to see that follow up work on the testing is done.

Entire proceeds of the seal sale will be used, the association going as far as possible with the $6000. Additional returns from those who have waited to return either seals or cash will be added to this amount for this year's work. All funds should be accounted for, with either seals returned or funds sent in, by February 1.
